In this sixth week of the Fall 2021 Session, the Fromm Institute Administrative team is busily preparing for the end of the Fromm Institute's 45th year and the start of our 46th year in January. So busy in fact, that we just realized you all will be taking a break from us in a few short weeks. Before our melancholy sets in, and before you leave us, here are a few important items for your calendar:

Fromm Institute Professor Scott Foglesong's Exciting New Series "Imagine" at the SF Conservatory's Continuing Education and Online

Hello Folks,

I wanted to alert you to a very interesting new workshop I'm conducting at the SF Conservatory of Music that is open to the public, both in person and online. We're holding it in the Foo Reading Room at the Conservatory's brand-new Bowes Center, on Van Ness immediately across from Davies Symphony Hall. It will also be available online for those who would prefer to participate via Zoom.

It's called "Imagine" and I plan to depart from the usual talk-and-listen kind of affair. Audience participation is encouraged, and we'll be engaging in some dialog during the sessions.

It's a joint presentation of the SF Conservatory's Continuing Education Division and the Amateur Music Network.

Six Mondays, starting October 18, at 5:30 PM.

I hope you might pass this on to people who will be interested, or consider putting something about this forthcoming workshop in your newsletter (if you have one, of course!)

All best,

Scott
